Title IX | Pregnant & Parenting Students

A Guide for Faculty & Staff

What does Title IX say about pregnant and parenting students?

This law specifically prohibits discrimination against students based on pregnancy, childbirth, false pregnancy, termination of pregnancy, or recovery from any of these conditions. Schools are required to treat pregnant and parenting students the same way they treat other students who are similarly able or unable to participate in school activities.

How does Miles College implement this policy?

Miles College has instituted a policy to provide appropriate, reasonable adjustments to educational programs and activities to support pregnant and parenting students.

- The College must excuse a student's absence because of pregnancy or childbirth for as long as the student's doctor deems the absences medically necessary. This must be granted irrespective of classroom attendance requirements set by a faculty member, department, school/college or division.
- At the conclusion of that period, the student must be given a reasonable amount of time to make up the work she missed and must be allowed to return to the same academic status as before her medically necessary absence.
- No artificial deadlines or time limitations can be imposed on a request for accommodations, but the University is limited in its ability to impact or implement accommodations retroactively.
- A faculty member does not have to fundamentally alter the nature of a program for pregnant or parenting students.

- This only applies to the student's pregnancy and/or childbirth. Schools are not required to excuse absences so that a father can be present for the birth of his child. However, the Office of Civil Rights recommends this – and it would be a good practice to implement – but it is not required by Title IX.
- A student in need of an education adjustment should submit a request, either in writing or in person, to the Provost. If the student is unable to do so, an appropriate representative may contact the Dean of Students on her behalf.
- The written medical recommendation must be submitted to the Provost. The Provost will then consult with the student and appropriate faculty members or department chairs to fashion an education adjustment that is appropriate for the student.
- Reasonable accommodations may include, but are not limited to:
 1. Providing accommodations requested by a pregnant student to protect the health and safety of the student and/or the pregnancy (such as allowing the student to maintain a safe distance from hazardous substances).
 2. Making modification to the physical environment, such as accessible seating.
 3. Providing mobility support.
 4. Extending deadlines and/or allowing the student to make up tests or assignments missed for pregnancy-related reasons.
 5. Offering remote learning options.
 6. Granting leave per the College medical leave policy or implementing incomplete grades for classes that will be resumed at a future date.
 7. Allowing breastfeeding students reasonable time and space to pump breast milk in a location that is private, clean, and reasonably accessible. Bathroom stalls do not satisfy this requirement.

- If it is unreasonable for a student to receive extra time to complete a course, the student will be given the option to withdraw from the class without penalty.
- In the event a request for adjustment is received by the Provost and Disability Services that may be covered by Section 504 or the Rehabilitation Act or the American with Disabilities Act, the request will be determined between the Provost and the Office of Disability Services.
- A faculty member cannot demand from a student a copy of the medical recommendation given by her doctor.
- If a student's program requires participating in off-campus programs, such as fieldwork, Miles cannot deny that student participation based on her pregnancy. Miles cannot ask for a doctor's note for continued participation unless the school requires a note for all students who have a medical condition that requires treatment by a doctor.
- Protections for parenting students extend to any parent on the basis of medical necessity related to the health of the parent who gave birth and/or baby during the pregnancy and postpartum period reasonably thereafter.
